INTRODUCTION

The History and Social Science Standards of Learning Curriculum Framework 2015, approved by the Board of Education on January 28, 2016, is a companion document to the 2015 History and Social Science Standards of Learning for Virginia Public Schools. The Curriculum Framework amplifies the Standards of Learning by defining the content understandings, knowledge, and skills that are measured by the Standards of Learning assessments.

The standards and Curriculum Framework are not intended to encompass the entire curriculum for a given grade level or course, nor to prescribe how the content should be taught. School divisions are encouraged to incorporate the standards and Curriculum Framework into a broader, locally designed curriculum. The Curriculum Framework delineates in greater specificity the minimum content that all teachers should teach and all students should learn. Teachers are encouraged to go beyond the standards and select instructional strategies and assessment methods appropriate for their students. Additional details such as the names of historical figures whose study further enriches the standards and clarifies the concepts under investigation will be found in the Curriculum Framework.

The Curriculum Framework facilitates teacher planning by identifying essential understandings, knowledge, and skills. Together, these key elements provide the focus of instruction for each standard. The purpose of each section is explained below:

Standard of Learning Statement

Each page begins with a Standard of Learning statement as a focus for teaching and learning. Students will apply social science skills to understand the interrelationships between the history, geography, economics, and civics content, as well as become actively engaged in their learning.

Essential Skills (Standard 1)

The essential history and social science skills are outlined in Standard 1 for each grade level or course. Students use these skills to increase understanding of the history and social sciences content, including historical, geographic, political, and economic events or trends. The development of these skills is important in order for students to become better-informed citizens.

The first column for Standard 1 contains “Essential Understandings,” which are described below. The second column contains examples of how the skill may be applied in the classroom.

Note: The skills will not be assessed in isolation; rather, they will be assessed as part of the content in the History and Social Science Standards of Learning.

Course Title/Course #: World History to 1500 A.D.

Essential Understandings

This column includes the fundamental background information necessary to acquire and apply the essential knowledge. The understandings should help students develop a sense of context, including why the essential knowledge is relevant to the standard; thus, teachers should use these understandings as a basis for lesson planning.

Essential Knowledge

This column delineates the key content facts, concepts, and ideas that students should grasp in order to demonstrate understanding of the standard. This information is not meant to be exhaustive or a limitation on what is taught in the classroom. Rather, it is meant to be the principal knowledge defining the standard.

The Curriculum Framework serves as a guide for Standards of Learning assessment development; however, assessment items may not and should not be verbatim reflections of the information presented in the Curriculum Framework.

STANDARD WHI.1a (Back to CPR)

The student will demonstrate skills for historical thinking, geographical analysis, economic decision making, and responsible citizenship by

A) synthesizing evidence from artifacts and primary and secondary sources to obtain information about events in world history;

Essential Understandings	Experiences may include but are not limited to the following:
Synthesizing involves combining processed information with other knowledge to logically reach a new interpretation and understanding of content. Primary and secondary sources enable us to examine evidence closely and to place it in a broader context. An artifact is an object or tool that tells us about the people from the past. A primary source is an artifact, document, image, or other source of information that was created during the time under study. A secondary source is a document, image, or other source of information that relates or discusses information originally presented elsewhere. Historical information may be acquired from a variety of sources: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Diaries• Interviews• Letters• Raw data• Court records and transcripts• Photographs	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Use a variety of information sources to do the following:<ul style="list-style-type: none">○ Examine and analyze the development of an ancient civilization, focusing on its social/political organization, religion, and economics. Use the information to determine the civilization’s impact and influence with relationship to resources, land and water usage, transportation methods, and communications.○ Examine and analyze geographic information and demographic data to determine how and why bordering civilizations cooperated or had conflicts.• Prepare a collection of primary and secondary sources related to a unit of study. Examine the sources to do the following:<ul style="list-style-type: none">○ Make and record observations about the sources and generate questions about each item.○ Determine commonalities and patterns in the themes of the sources, as well as how the sources connect to the overarching topic of the lesson.○ Create a graphic organizer that describes how each source depicts a specific point of view about a period of study.

The student will demonstrate skills for historical thinking, geographical analysis, economic decision making, and responsible citizenship by
b) using geographic information to determine patterns and trends to understand world history;

Essential Understandings	Experiences may include but are not limited to the following:
Analyzing and interpreting involves identifying the important elements of geographic sources in order to make inferences and generalizations and draw conclusions. Knowledge of geography and application of geographic skills enable us to understand relationships between people, their behavior, places, and the environment for problem solving and historical understanding. The physical geography of a location had a direct impact on the lives of people in world history and how they adapted to their environment. Five Themes of Geography <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Location: Defined according to its position on the earth's surface; where is it?● Place: Locations having distinctive features that give them meaning and character that differ from other locations; what is it like?● Region: A unit on the earth's surface that has unifying characteristics; how are places similar or different?● Movement: The way people, products, and information move from one place to another; how do people, goods, and ideas move from one location to another?	<ul style="list-style-type: none">● Use a variety of sources, such as the following:<ul style="list-style-type: none">○ GIS (Geographic Information Systems)○ Field work○ Satellite images○ Photographs○ Maps, globes○ Charts and graphs○ Databases○ Primary sources○ Diagrams● Select an ancient civilization and analyze the relationship between its physical and human geography.● Create a physical map of a specific region or location (e.g., Fertile Crescent). Gather and analyze geographic information to determine patterns and trends related to the movement of population, products, resources, ideas, and language.● Examine maps of a specific region or location before and after a major conflict to discuss how the conflict impacted the social, political, and economic landscapes of the region or location.● Use maps to explain how the location of resources influences patterns, trends and migration of a population.

STANDARD WHL.1f (Back to CPR)

The student will demonstrate skills for historical thinking, geographical analysis, economic decision making, and responsible citizenship by
f) explaining how indirect cause-and-effect relationships impacted people, places, and events in world history;

Essential Understandings	Experiences may include but are not limited to the following:
A cause-and-effect relationship is a relationship in which one event (the cause) makes another event (the effect) happen. There can be multiple causes and effects. An indirect cause-and-effect relationship usually takes time to establish. Such relationships are often unforeseen, unplanned, or connected to the main causes and effects. Explaining includes justifying why the evidence credibly supports the claim. Diversity creates a variety of perspectives, contributions, and challenges. Events that lead to conflict often have multiple causes and effects.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">● Apply a process for explaining indirect cause-and-effect relationships, such as the following:<ul style="list-style-type: none">○ Choose an established effect and brainstorm causes of that effect.○ Categorize and organize the causes into direct or indirect causes.○ Describe direct and indirect items separately.○ Compare and contrast direct and indirect causes.○ Identify the most important difference between the direct and indirect causes.○ Draw conclusions about the impact on people, places, and events.○ Discuss, defend, and refine conclusions.● Compare charts, graphs, and/or maps to determine the role diversity played in affecting the social, economic, and political structure of the civilizations, empires, or countries.● Create flow charts, storyboards, and timelines to explore multiple causes and effects.● Determine how the choices of selected people/groups impacted world history.● Examine both intended and unintended consequences of an event, including the following questions:<ul style="list-style-type: none">○ What was the context for the event to take place?○ What actions were taken?○ What was the result of these actions?

STANDARD WHI.1g (Back to CPR)

The student will demonstrate skills for historical thinking, geographical analysis, economic decision making, and responsible citizenship by
g) analyzing multiple connections across time and place;

Essential Understandings	Experiences may include but are not limited to the following:
Analyzing includes identifying the important elements of a topic. Analytical thinking is further strengthened when connections are made between two or more topics. Activating prior knowledge helps make connections to new concepts and provides more complex information about people, places, experiences, and events in world history.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">● Select an ancient civilization, religion, or event. Organize various aspects of the event to determine and explain how the civilization, religion, or event changed over time. Organizing aspects may include the following:<ul style="list-style-type: none">○ Social factors○ Political factors○ Economic factors○ Cultural factors● Identify how cultures changed to accommodate evolving ideas and beliefs, including the following:<ul style="list-style-type: none">○ Revolutions○ Conflicts○ Reforms○ Human-environment interactions○ Laws and policy changes○ Advancements○ Conflicts○ Diversity○ Movements and migrations

STANDARD WHI.1h (Back to CPR)

The student will demonstrate skills for historical thinking, geographical analysis, economic decision making, and responsible citizenship by
h) using a decision-making model to analyze and explain the incentives for and consequences of a specific choice made;

Essential Understandings	Experiences may include but are not limited to the following:
Choices have consequences that may be positive or negative, intended or unintended. Decision making involves distinguishing between relevant and irrelevant information. Decision-making models serve several purposes. They can help us <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • make decisions for the future • understand the choices made in the past • analyze the outcomes of the decisions already made • compare the expected costs and benefits of alternative choices • identify the costs and benefits of specific choices made. Incentives are actions or rewards that encourage people to act. The student will demonstrate skills for historical thinking, geographical analysis, economic decision making, and responsible citizenship by
j) investigating and researching to develop products orally and in writing.

Essential Understandings	Experiences may include but are not limited to the following:
Experiences in the classroom provide opportunities for students to read, think, speak, and write about social science content. The skill of investigating involves acting like a detective—formulating questions and proactively setting out to try to answer them. The skill of researching works in tandem with investigating in that students need to uncover material in order to adequately answer questions formulated when investigating. Students take more ownership over investigating and researching when they are able to choose the type of product to produce. Student inquiry drives the design process. Specifically, students <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● formulate a question to investigate ● create a goal/hypothesis ● conduct research and collaborate with teacher and peers 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Write a college admission essay for an archaeology program. Provide details in the essay about a specific region, historic site, or ancient civilization (culture) of interest. Include a list of questions about the civilization that may be supported by the archaeological program. ● Prepare a multimedia or video presentation of a debate. Gather evidence to support the arguments and conclusions. Debate topics may include the following: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ Julius Caesar: Hero or villain? ○ Greater impact on Christianity: Constantine or Paul? ○ Greatest contribution to modern democracy: Greece or Rome? ● Create a gallery display of an ancient civilization. Investigate and gather items that illustrate its economic and political influences, geographic impact, and social structure. Choose six items that best represent the civilization and include a justification for each. ● Investigate the history of the Hagia Sophia. Write a position statement answering the following question: “Should the Hagia Sophia be returned to a Christian Church, converted to a mosque, or continue in its current capacity as a museum celebrating both Christianity and Islam?” ● Create a travel blog describing a ten-day trip to a specified region. Develop an itinerary, considering how the geography of the region would affect the sequence of the trip. Investigate the current religious practices, economic and social interactions, and political structure. Compare the contemporary region to the area as it was prior to 1500 A.D. (C.E.). ● Investigate one of the five major religions. Discuss in a social media post or blog one aspect of the religion that has stayed constant over time.

Essential Understandings	Essential Knowledge
Archaeologists continue to find and interpret evidence of early humans and their lives.	Archaeologists study past cultures by locating and analyzing human remains, settlements, fossils, and artifacts. Archaeologists apply scientific tests, such as carbon dating, to analyze fossils and artifacts. Stonehenge is an example of an archaeological site in England. It was begun during the Neolithic Age and completed during the Bronze Age. Aleppo and Jericho are examples of early cities in the Fertile Crescent that are studied by archaeologists. Çatalhöyük is an example of a Neolithic settlement currently under excavation in Anatolia.
